12:00PM—1:00PM

WORLD BUILDING IN FANTASY AND SCIENCE FICTION

Location: Garden Presenter: Devri

World Building is an important part of any story. Put the grocery store on the wrong corner in nowhereville and somebody will let you know. But when it comes to writing fantasy and science fiction, creating your own world is more than just proper research. In this class you will learn how things like species, social classes, topography, religion, government and a full history can add depth and richness to your story. Learn how to use the world itself to hurtle your plot forward with breathtaking intensity. And learn why so many of the limitations we feel as authors, exist only in our own minds.

STOP APOLOGIZING TO YOUR READERS

Location: Garden

Apologize?? I'm sure you're thinking, "I don't do that!" Odds are, you do. Ever felt the need to explain why your villain is as evil as you say? How the world you built came to be? Why it is in fact feasible that dragons can breath in space...roll with me here. Or maybe that dragons are there at all? (Read Game of Thrones? Ever seen George explain why white walkers and dragons exist in an otherwise average world? Nope.) Have you argued with a reader or editor that the thirty pages of back story are, in fact, necessary to your story? Ever debated with a reader because they just didn't "get" you? If yes, you are guilty of the dreaded, "apology". Come learn what it is, why it kills both your story and your readers enjoyment, and how to stop doing it!
